- 1. Create a newsletter on Substack and share your Substack account link with us in your email. It's free.
  2. Refer to our newsletter (theaisignal.com) for reference.

  Feel free to watch tutorials on YouTube to get familiar with Substack—it's straightforward to use.

- You can write for any of the two newsletters: https://chimefeed.com/ or https://www.theaisignal.com/

  - Chimefeed: A tech newsletter covering global tech and startup news in a concise 5-minute format. Think of it as TechCrunch, but a newsletter, shorter and more digestible. I'm sharing a high-level guideline document for Chimefeed, which you are free to modify and improve with better structure.

- The AISignal: Visit the website to understand its structure. Write news in the same pattern and sections as shown on the site without copying existing content.
- Start writing newsletters for January 29, 30, 31, and February 1. For any questions, reply to this same email thread to maintain context.
- Also, please share your resume in this email thread. Reference websites for both newsletters will be shared with you.
- You can write even today as well and publish on your substack and share the link with us with within this email thread.

you have to write everyday, for that particular date.
Please read the instructions carefully and write accordingly.
you need to write for each section mentioned in the document.
Use images for each section.
See the example written as reference newsletters.
